Mecham's experience as acting social vice president last summer term was a major factor in his decision, said Henrie.

Of his appointment, Mecham said, "I'm not at all happy about the circumstances surrounding the appointment, but I feel I can keep the Social Office on its feet."

Also on the council agenda is discussion of review and possible revision of the ASBYU Constitution.

Additional council agenda items are the approval of three new traffic court judges and a proposal by the law school that ASBYU partially fund a survey it is conducting.

Also planned for the business meeting are a review of the Elections Committee's program to increase student voter turnout, and topics for future student forums.

To accommodate the change of social vice presidents, Mecham has made some staff changes. Bud Hydeman, former Our Gang committee chairman, has been appointed administrative assistant to Mecham, and former Our Gang co-chairman Jody Pifer assuming the chairmanship vacated by Hydeman.

"Dan (Morgan) had the office well-organized, so we were able to function smoothly in the transition," said Mecham.

Dr. Arthur Henry King

Dr. Arthur Henry King, professor of English at BYU, has been elected to give the 14th Annual Distinguished Faculty Lecture, which was announced by BYU Pres. Dallin H. Oaks.

The lecture is considered the single most prestigious event in campus life, and is honored by a faculty member.

"The Child is Father of the Man" is the title Dr. King has chosen for his lecture, which will be given March 4 at 8 p.m. in the Pardon Drama Theatre of the Harriet Fine Arts Center. The public is welcome to attend.

The honor of Faculty Lecturer is conferred once achieveing transcendental enlightenment and who has contributed significantly to his field and gained respect as a scholar.

A native of England and an honors graduate of Cambridge University, Dr. King has twice been recognized by Queen Elizabeth for distinguished public service. He has taught in universities in Sweden, Pakistan, and Iran. In addition, he has served as assistant director-general of the British Council, a representative body which handles the educational and cultural work of the British Government overseas. Inspector journeys in this capacity has taken him to Europe, Africa, the Middle East, Asia, Australia, and Latin America.

Massive quake strikes in Guatemala; 2,000 die

By ALFONSO ANZUETO
Associated Press Writer

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — The military chief of staff of the National Emergency Committee said about 2,000 persons were killed Wednesday in Guatemala by a severe earthquake. No casualties were reported in other countries.

The earthquake hit this city as it slept before dawn Wednesday and its force was felt throughout a 2,000-mile strip of Central America, Mexico. Homes and walls crashed down in this capital and one unconfirmed report said as many as 600 persons were killed here.

There were no reports of casualties from the earthquake in neighboring Honduras and El Salvador to the southeast of Guatemala or in Mexico, 1,100 miles to the northwest. Severe damage was reported in parts of Honduras.

Panic hits
Hundreds of thousands poured into the streets here in panic after it hit. Guatemala City may host to large numbers of American tourists this time of year, but there were no reports of American casualties.

Col. Manuel Angel Ponce, the chief of staff, said the figure of 2,000 dead is conservative. He added that "alarming reports" were coming in from the interior of the country 15 hours after the earthquake struck at 2:04 a.m. (EST), and sent hundreds of relief workers to Guatemala's 1.5 million population in panic into the streets in predawn darkness.

Col. Ponce said the death toll in this capital was estimated at more than 300. Other unconfirmed reports said the toll here might be 500 to 600.

Super jet gets go-ahead for N.Y., D.C. landings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman Jr. authorized two foreign airlines Wednesday to offer limited scheduled flights of the fast but noisy Concorde supersonic passenger jet into two U.S. airports for 16 months.

The order is effective March 4, but the 16-month trial period will not start until the first scheduled flight is made, probably in April.

Order challenged

Coleman's order was challenged in court within minutes of its release. Several senators also said they planned to ask Congress to overturn the ruling.

However, President Ford expressed strong support for his Cabinet officer and said he would stand behind Coleman's decision.

Coleman's ruling would permit British Airways and Air France to offer limited Concorde service from London and Paris to International Airport near Washington and to Kennedy International Airport in New York.

Daily flights

Each airline would be authorized to offer a maximum of two daily flights each to Kennedy and one daily flight each to Dulles. The flights could be operated between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m.

Coleman retained authority to cancel the demonstration period at any time on four months' notice and to cancel it immediately in the event of an emergency "deemed harmful to the health, welfare or safety of the American people."

Approval disputed

The secretary's order with respect to Dulles is final unless overturned by Congress or a federal court, since that airport is owned by the federal government. The Port Authority of New York-New Jersey apparently must also approve the Concorde with respect to Kennedy since that airport is owned by the authority.

Coleman said he had not talked with the Port Authority members and did not know which way that agency would rule.

The ruling brings the supersonic passenger aircraft to a country that rejected its SST program less than five years ago. Congress will also approve the American supersonic transport development program in 1971 by cutting off government funding.

The ruling also may place pressure on U.S. airlines to buy the Concorde or the Russian-built SST in order to complete with British Airways and Air France's North Atlantic routes.

S.W.A.T. police unit organized

A special weapons and tactics (S.W.A.T.) unit has been formed by the Utah County Sheriff's Department, according to Sgt. Jerry Scott. The unit, which includes Sgt. Owen Quarberg, said the trials held in the Smith Fieldhouse were based on candidate scores on a written test and performance in running, swimming and calisthenics.

As it turned out, we had just enough people who qualified highly enough in the tryouts," Quarberg said.

The team, which consists of five men, will leave March 21 for a week of training at Camp Williams, Utah, Quarberg said.

Scott, who was named co-captain of the unit, said their purpose would be to handle "all emergencies" involving shooting and hostages that arise in the county.

State official, 2 Y teachers favor SST landing decision

By BROOKE TODD
University Staff Writer

The State Aeronautics Director and two BYU professors favor Transportation Secretary William Coleman's decision to permit the supersonic Concorde to land in the United States.

"I personally feel he made the right decision. It should be able to land temporarily if certain conditions go along with my own approval, but I would like to see it come in; then collect noise data and see if the opponents or proponents are right," Director Bobby Walker told the Utah.

In 1971, Congress killed the American supersonic transport (SST) development program by cutting off government funding.

Controversy about the airplane concerns its noise during takeoff and its damage to the earth's ozone layer.

The supersonic Concorde is a joint British and French airplane. Currently Britain, France and Russia are the only makers of a supersonic plane, according to Maj. Robert Legget, an assistant professor in aerospace studies at BYU.

Walker and Dr. James H. Polke, a professor in mechanical engineering, agreed with a temporary landing of the supersonic Concorde in separate interviews Wednesday.

Concerning the controversies surrounding the supersonic plane, Maj. Legget said, "At the present time I don't feel like we know enough about the effects of supersonic flight in such areas as noise pollution, ozone layer destruction, etc., to make a final decision."

Dr. Polke also represented the Federal Aviation Administration at the Boeing Company in 1967-69, said:

"It's a great decision, the only way to go. Anything else would have been wrong. This is just progress."

According to Dr. Polke, people need to get around the world faster for economic and cultural reasons. He described the SST as the "natural evolution of the airplane."

Viking project nears Mars, scientist says

By JOE STIGGINS
University Staff Writer

The Mars Viking project, now at the halfway mark, is 15 million miles from its final destination.

Dr. George D. Sands, associate project scientist for NASA, spoke at BYU on the Mars Viking project Wednesday.

Dr. Sands told the Utah that the Viking project cost $930 million, which he believes is a bargain. Work began on the Mars-based project in 1968. There are approximately 700 people on the flight team, most of whom at their own laboratories until the Viking landing in June

Dr. George D. Sands
... NASA scientist

1976 when everyone will return to the Jet Propulsion Lab in Pasadena, Calif., he said.

Dr. Sands said the Viking Flight Team management is based at Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va. The Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Pasadena is responsible for orbiting and landing the Vikings.

The Martin Marietta Corp.

has the contract for landing and integrating operations, he said.

Dr. Sands said two different laboratories began work on the Viking rockets on Aug. 1, 1975 and Sept. 9, 1975. The first is scheduled to land on June 19 this year, and the second on July 4. The first lab is to land in Chryse, or "Land of Gold," and the second to land in Cydonia, both valleys on Mars.

Both laboratories were sterilized in heat above 113 degrees centigrade for forty hours, to avoid carrying bacteria to Mars with them, said Dr. Sands.

Two main objectives in picking a landing site are safety and scientific interest. A scientific committee studied for nearly one and a half years to find the best landing sites, he said.

Dr. Sands said the life span of the two laboratories is 60 days, but certain instruments will operate for 83 years, while others will wear out much sooner.

He said the crafts are so sophisticated that when the units land, only one millimeter of soil will be disturbed. One of the units that was to be used this summer in the Viking was destroyed recently as it neared Mars' orbit, said Dr. Sands. It was a soil sampling oven, lost in a pocket of space that has come to be known as the "Great Galactic Ghoul" where other accidents have befallen spacecraft.

Dr. Sands said the Russians have had 15 probes to Mars, the most famous being Soviet Mars 11, which soft landed and sent back 20 seconds of television data. The Russians still don't know happened to it, he said.

The three instruments that will help decide if the chosen area is any good, will be the television cameras, water vapor instruments, and the temperature sensors, according to Dr. Sands.

Scholars meet planned

A special conference for the ASBYU Academics Office council and BYU scholars is scheduled Friday at 4:30 p.m. in 388 ELWC.

"We've invited top scholars from each of the major colleges on campus to meet with us," said Mark Harmon, ASBYU Academics vice president.

The conference has been scheduled to explore the question, "What can students do to get the most out of their college education?" Harmon said.

"The results of the meeting will be published," Harmon said. Several thousand brochures of the "How To Get The Most Out Of Your College Career" will be prepared and distributed to students at a later date, he added.

The panel of scholars will also be asked to make suggestions about the most appropriate way to use some $8,000-10,000 in unclassified funds. "It'll be kind of jam session to see how to use the money," Harmon said.

In addition, current academic programs will also be discussed. Students with strong feelings and significant input are encouraged to attend, Harmon concluded.

Follow regulations

Burdick urged candidates to give attention to following the regulations, and encouraged students to report suspected substantial violations to him personally in 438 ELWC.

"Campaign violations are investigated by the Attorney General's Office," she added.

The most common violations in the past have been candidates' soliciting votes and organizing campaign staffs of people other than their personal friends before the nominations meeting is held and candidacies approved, according to Miss Burdick.

Campus housing regulations and campaign hours policies are the regulations most often violated during the actual course of campaigning, she said.

Nominations meeting

This year's nominations meeting is expected to be larger than those of previous years, because for the first time the complete staff of each candidate is invited. Formerly, only candidates and their campaign managers attended the nominations meeting, said Miss Burdick. Approximately 50 candidates are expected to run for the nine ASBYU elected offices, she said. Following the primaries, the two candidates for each office with the most votes run in the final election.

Balloting for this year's primary election will be March 3, 4 and 5. Students will go to the polls March 10, 11 and 12 to vote in the finals, she said.

Extend voting

A poor voter turnout last year has prompted the Elections Committee to consider extending the voting period for the fall elections an extra day, Miss Burdick said.

In 1975, only 7,984 students voted in the finals, a representation of 32 percent of the total student body.

Accident victim OK

A BYU student involved in a pedestrian accident Tuesday afternoon was released from the McDonald Student Health Center later that evening in excellent condition, according to Dr. Dee Nelson.

Donald South, 27, of 350 S. 900 East, was struck by a car in the crosswalk northeast of the Wilkinson Center shortly before 5 p.m., according to BYU Security reports.

Chief Robert Kelshaw said no citations have been issued in connection with the accident.

Willis E. Stone
...Liberty Amendment author

Businessman speaks today

The author of the proposed Liberty Amendment to the U.S. Constitution will speak in the Varsity Theater at 10 a.m. today.

Willis E. Stone, industrial engineer and constitutional scholar, will speak on "Getting Government Out of Business," according to Gaylord Swin, a graduate student in political science from Carmel, Calif.

"Perhaps the most significant amendment to be proposed in the last 30 years."

Swin explained that the Liberty Amendment would require the national government to divorce itself from all business, professional financial, and industrial enterprises that are not specifically sanctioned by the constitution.

The amendment would also repeal the personal income tax, Swin added.

Abortion stirs dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's suggestion Tuesday that a ban on abortion be left up to the states puts him at odds with Republican challenger Ronald Reagan, who says the federal government should outlaw most abortions.

All three Democratic presidential candidates, Sen. Henry Jackson shares Ford's views on letting the states decide but has not suggested, as Ford did, a constitutional amendment to allow this.

The other two candidates to come out for the ban on abortion by demand is Democrat George Wallace of Alabama. Both Wallace and Reagan have endorsed an amendment banning abortion except in extreme cases.

Most other candidates have said they are against abortion in principle but oppose amending the Constitution to ban it.

Ford's statement made originally in a taped television interview and released by the White House Tuesday, was a response to a mounting campaign issue over which no candidate would have much control if elected president.

The Supreme Court ruled in January 1973 that states cannot prohibit abortions in the first three months of pregnancy, although they were left some regulatory control thereafter.

A few last dozen constitutional amendments are pending in Congress which would outlaw abortion at the federal level. The most stringent of these would ban any abortion from the moment of conception.

There are 40 more proposed amendments which would outlaw abortion at the federal level. The most stringent of these would ban any abortion from the moment of conception.

law students try skill Advocates program

DIONNE JOHNSON
Universe Staff Writer

Important part of a law student's training is practical experience in courtroom trials. At BYU's J. Reuben Clark School, this training is provided by the Board of Advocates.

According to Garth K. Chandler, chairman of the Board of Advocates, the purpose of the program is to provide opportunities for future lawyers to practice procedure still in law school. This is done by providing mock trial competition.

One of the board's main goals is to open up all areas of law to become a part of the board's certain activities must be met.

Membership requirements

For a third-year law student from Idaho Falls, said during the first year of school, all students write briefs and argue them before the court.

Based on this performance, an expressed desire to join the grade-point average, the third-year students are 32 first-year students.

Chandler explained that the program is divided into three divisions: appellate, administrative and trial. Each division is concerned with "housekeeping," such as budgeting, awards and expenses, and Chandler said.

Under the appellate division, late students are given practical experience in writing briefs, arguing them before panels of judges, and learning other points of law.

Chandler said:

"Appellate courts handle cases that have been decided in lower courts and then appealed. Second-year law mistakes here, instead of in the courtroom."

The program provided by staged mock trials helps the law student learn rules of evidence, how to handle witnesses and other "very real situations" in trials. Chandler said it is "just like a real trial, with the opening and closing arguments, cross-examination of a jury and a judge. The judges, who are prominent local judges, evaluate the student's performance."

There is regional and national competition in mock trials also. Last week, BYU's team took second in the regional competition held in San Jose, Calif. Members of the team were Duane Smith, American Fork; Chuck Carr, Provo; and Chandler.

Take second place

"We did very well coming in second," Chandler said. He added that the team had very little time to prepare, yet were competing against teams that had practiced the problem for as much as six months.

Other programs under the trial division of the board are the civil trial practice seminar, client practice competition and a trial lecture series, which is planned for the future.

The civil trial practice seminar is designed to give third-year law students experience in trial procedures. Chandler explained that the students attend lectures and are then given actual cases that have already been tried and resolved.

The clients then prepare and argue the cases, without knowing the actual results. "When we finish, we compare the real attorney's work with ours," Chandler said.

Each student works on two cases, one as plaintiff and one as the defendant. The way "they get to see both sides," said Chandler. They go all the way through actual trial procedure, from pre-trial to the actual trial, then to post-trial, and finally to appeal, Chandler added.

The client's view

Another program which helps law students see the client's side of the case is client counseling competition. In this competition, a "client" comes to the lawyer with a problem, and the student must prepare a framework of possible solutions. The client meets with the client and gives his recommendation. The student is judged on how well he conducted the interview, preparation put into the interview and his recommendation.

The final program, the trial lecture series, is still in the formative stages.

Make errors now

The third division is concerned with trial procedure. Chandler said it allows students to "make

Ad program recognized nationally

By BROOKE TODD
University Staff Writer

Ironically, the more advertising the Daily Universe carries, the more room there is for news, explained Advertising Director E.A. Jerome.

Jerome, a faculty member who also teaches advertising, explained some of the reasons the Daily Universe program has gained national attention recently.

Jerome and the Universe staff were honored in a December issue of Editor and Publisher, a national magazine for publishing executives.

The article came after Jerome was honored by the National Council of Advertisers (NCCPA) as its 1975 Distinguished Business Adviser.

The Editor and Publisher article said:

"Although the administrators of most high schools, colleges and universities have little concern over the financial side of their newspapers, Brigham Young University is doing something to relieve the business problems associated with their campus newspaper."

The actual size of the Daily Universe is governed by the adverting, said Jerome. The University uses a 60 per cent advertisement to 40 per cent news ratio, a common ratio for the nation's average commercial newspaper, he added.

Five years ago the Daily Universe was organized as a laboratory to train journalists and editors in advertising, giving them the actual experience of working on a newspaper, according to Jerome.

At the end of this year, there will be a "543 per cent increase of advertising in the five-year period," said Jerome. This increase has allowed a larger newspaper including more national and international news.

The increase of national and international news is important, according to Jerome, since less than 30 per cent of the BYU student body reads any other newspaper.

Surpass national average

Today, only 12 per cent of the Daily Universe production costs are taken from student fee allocations, Jerome said. The average advertisements bear 88 per cent of the production costs.

Financial support for the majority of the nation's daily newspapers comes 70 per cent from advertising and 30 per cent from circulation, according to Rivers and Schramm's "Responsibility in Mass Communication."

The Universe advertising staff consists of Jerome, one student manager, two assistant student managers nine other salesmen and two agents.

The salesmen may work for one year. Assistant student managers are rotated monthly among staff members, giving staff members leadership according to Jerome.

The advertising staff is the best the university has, BYU in training students to handle advertising programs.

Apparently Thompson is not the only person impressed with BYU's advertising program.

According to Jerome, he receives approximately 12 letters each semester from universities and companies interested in advertising. One such letter was sent by the president of Sales and Marketing Executives of Minneapolis.

In the letter, he asked for information about BYU's program and stated, "We are constantly trying to develop programs to help more people in a sales career. Unfortunately, very few colleges and universities are doing much about that."

What helps to make the advertising staff so successful, according to Jerome, is that salesmen are paid on commission.

CDFR study shows dating curtailed by close proximity

A coed with boring Saturday nights may be mistaken in thinking that living in an apartment complex can spice life up.

"Interpersonal interaction minimizes dating. You don't want to date someone you have to see," according to Wen Harris, who questioned 23 males at Riviera apartments about how many girls they asked out and where they were from.

Harris and his two other CDFR graduates, John Hill and Bill Strunks, tested the theory that the proportion of marriages decreases as distance between parties increases.

According to a paper they wrote for a CDFR 596R class, geographic proximity and intense interaction may inhibit dating.

Riviera's male and female apartments each other and are separated by 30 parking lots and pathways. The lots and sidewalks are used by both sexes.

Males at another complex, Robert Apartments, were questioned to see whether interaction prompts males to ask neighbors out.

In this case, social dealings are primarily within the BYU branches. The study said they had contact in family home exchanges, branch parties, and firesides, but seldom dated each other.

Anemia signs, cures offered

EDITOR'S NOTE: The question and answer column is provided by the BYU Health Center. Barbara Duesler, M.D., answered this week's questions.

Question: I was told that most college girls are anemic and that every girl should be taking iron. What is your recommendation?

Answer: First of all, what is anemia? It is a deficiency of red blood cells as measured in the blood. Most girls are not anemic, at least not in this part of the world; however, women do become more commonly anemic than men. The reason for this is that women lose a moderate amount of blood each month beginning with the early teen years and lasting until the menopause. This blood has to be replaced by the body in order to keep the menemoglobin (measure of red blood cells) in the normal range.

Usually this is not a problem for the body unless some of the necessary building blocks are missing or the body has a chronic disease. Among the building substances for blood, iron is the factor that is more commonly deficient than any of the others.

A prolonged lack of iron in the diet will eventually lead to a "iron-deficiency anemia," which is the most common type of anemia, especially in women. This can easily be corrected within one or several months by taking iron tablets daily. It can also be prevented by eating many foods rich in iron, such as meat, leafy vegetables, and eggs.

There are many other types of anemia; some are related to a deficiency of certain other necessary substances than iron, either lacking in the diet or that the body is not able to absorb. Some anemias represent an inherited disorder of blood-cell and hemoglobin formation, and others accompany various acute or chronic systemic diseases. All of these are quite rare and require specific laboratory tests for their diagnosis.

seeks student publicists

Students planning to go home to 33 nearby towns for Presidents' Day weekend Feb. 14-16 are invited to join the Brigham! Brigade, a group of student volunteers being recruited to publicize BYU's upcoming Centennial musical.

"So many people from out of town are asking about 'BRIGHAM!' that we're organizing this special effort to publicize it in outlying communities," ASBYU Pres. Bob Henrie explained of the brigade.

Two to four brigade members will be asked to visit their hometowns and distribute news releases, posters and other promotional materials as well as appear on local radio talk shows to announce the production, Henrie said.

Brian Johnson, ASBYU representative to the BYU Centennial, will recruit students, working with David R. Lyon, assistant for community affairs in University Relations.

Utah towns on the brigade list include: Nephi, Cedar City, St. George, Price, Green River, Moab, Duchesne, Roosevelt, Vernal, Heber, Ephraim, Richfield, Manti, Salt Lake, Gunnison, Brigham City, Orem, Layton, Kaysville and Bountiful.

Towns in Idaho are Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Twin Falls and Robbie.

In Wyoming, Rock Springs and Evanston are on the list. Nevada towns include Elko, Wells, Ely and Las Vegas.

Additional volunteers are needed in Utah and Salt Lake Valley for Provo, Springville, Spanish Fork, Payson, Santquin, Orem, Pleasant Grove, American Fork, Lehi, Alpine, Salt Lake City, Midvale, Kearns, Midvale, West Jordan and Sandy.

Students from those towns desiring to participate should contact the BRIGHAM! Brigade personnel at ext. 4101. A special orientation will be held next week.

"Here's a chance for BYU students to share a special Centennial highlight with their family and friends at home. Needless to say, we hope the phone will be burning with calls," chairman Johnson noted.

Each Brigham member will be given a promotional kit and a special BRIGHAM!

Speaking of the play, Johnson noted, "Seeing it will add a life-long memory to the BYU Centennial."

The musical will open April 6 and run for eight nights, concluding April 17.

Gimmick card collects names

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A traveler from Wampum, Pa., is busy on a U.S. Bicentennial card that he hopes eventually will be 1,000 feet long with signatures from around the world.

"Sure, it's a gimmick," acknowledged Devon Smith, 49. "But I want to give the world something with human interest and something new."

It's 100 yards, 410 feet long and has 12,718 signatures. He says he got the idea for the card on July 4, 1974, and has since traveled across the United States and into Mexico.

It's not often a night at home turns into a Cinderella story as it will tonight for Sylvia Lorraine Conger, a BYU employee and former student. Miss Conger entered and won first place in a "Why I Want to Attend the Nell Diamond Concert" contest sponsored by KOVO radio after deciding she couldn't afford to attend the concert. A full course dinner at a local restaurant, front-row seats to the concert and an autographed Diamond album were the prize. Miss Conger and her date, Mike Post, a physics senior, got a chance Wednesday to try out their coach for the evening, the 1937 Goldfinger Rolls Royce, complete with chauffeur Dennis Bachin.

Many Mormons and non-Mormons alike are expected to attend some of five summer dramatic productions in the United States depicting early Mormon history, according to LDS Public Communications. Details of the events are outlined below and all are free to the public.

Kicking off the summer is "Missouri, Mormons and Miracles" at Independence, Mo., June 17-18 at 9 p.m. To be presented in an outdoor amphitheater, the show depicts Mormon Visitation Center; this show will feature 300 actors, dancers and singers dramatizing early Mormon history in Missouri. The audience must bring their own folding chairs.

"Mormon Miracle Pageant" runs July 8-10, 13-17, at 9 p.m. nightly in Mantle. The production, now in its tenth year, drew 110,000 last year. The dramatic portrayal on a hillside slope at the foot of Mantle Mountain depicts early Mormon history as told from the Book of Mormon.

Now in its twelfth year, "And It Came to Pass" will play in the Oakland Mormon Inter-State Center adjacent to the Oakland Temple, Oakland, Calif., July 13-17, 20-24. Shows begin at 8 p.m. nightly. Improvements sought in weekend mat meets Cougar grappler Brad Hansen could spell the difference in the weekend wrestling confrontations with Wyoming and Colorado State. Both Friday and Saturday encounters are scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Hansen, a 167-pound junior, was the only Cougar to bring home an individual championship from the lineup.

The Cowboys are led by Danny Godberle (194), who will battle Steve Sanderson in the 142 category. Sanderson is currently rated third among the WAC wrestlers in his class.

Colorado State, at 94-18, is led by 126-pound Rob Anderson, who has not lost in 21 dual matches. Ram heavyweight Tom Burns, 17-1 for the season, will meet Cougar Tom Schmid.

Bethel Hansen and Sanderson, BYU also features Sam Orme (148) and Alan Albright (167), both second-ranked western wrestlers, according to National Mat News.

Through BYU stands below the 100 mark, all but one loss have come at the hands of nationally ranked opponents. Injuries, illnesses and matmen not returning to school have played havoc with the season, far but according to Coach Fred Davis, the Cougars are in strong contention for their ninth WAC title in 11 years.

Dedication, skill pay off for cager

By LISA GUNN
University Sports Writer

Coach Frank Arnold seems to think he's got a good thing going for him on the basketball team in the form of reserve forward Chris Williams.

"He's a real pleasure to coach," Arnold said. "He works hard, never complains and gives one hundred per cent."

"He plays a solid, steady game," the coach continued. "He's not the flashy player people are apt to notice, yet he's quick, dedicated to the program, and does his best with what's got."

The 6'6" senior from Lakewood, Colo., began playing on scholarship for BYU in 1972, when he started eight games and played in every other game that season.

Last season he started four games and put in top performances which included 10 points against WAC champion Arizona State and 12 against San Jose State.

When the team went East at Christmas, only 10 players could go because of an NCAA ruling. Williams was left home because the team needed the help at other positions, Asst. Coach John McMullen said.

"I'm surprised he's back from the holidays; he's looked very good in practice and we're going to use him," he added.

Williams first became interested in basketball when he and his brothers played in the front yard with a basket rigged over the garage door, he said.

He's enjoyed playing a variety of sports and didn't decide to concentrate on basketball until his sophomore year in high school, when his build and ability directed his interests more toward the court.

While playing for Alameda High School in Lakewood, Williams averaged 21 points a game and was an all-state performer.

His strongest position in high school was offensive forward. However, since coming to BYU, Williams said he plays best on defense, "I guess I feel better on defense now because that's what I've been working hardest on. Defense is very important in college ball, and if that's what the coach emphasizes, that's what you work on." He added that he's worked hard on the wing, facing the basket, because he never practiced that way, he said.

When he was younger, he occasionally dreamed of becoming a pro, Williams admitted, but he feels he never really had the talent to make it.

"Professionals, professional basketball is a long, hard road. It involves hard schedules that take you away from your family too much," he said.

Williams plans to be married this spring to Vicki Balafas, a BYU senior in elementary education from Williams' hometown of Lakewood.

After graduation, Williams plans to continue his indoor sport as an out-of-doors person. He likes to hunt pheasant and other game and spends the warm months fishing.

Williams' college basketball career comes to an end this season when his eligibility runs out. He plans to continue his studies at BYU until December, when he will graduate in building construction.

At that time, he will return to Denver to join his father in his construction firm. Basketball will no longer be a primary factor in his life then, he said.

"I'm still involved in city leagues and for fun, but I won't take it seriously anymore," he commented.

However, he said he doesn't regret the many hours of practice and game time he has put in during his years at BYU.

"It was all worth it," Williams said. "I love the program and I love the game."

Events begin in '76 Games

The BYU hockey team will compete in the league playoffs as the second-place team after defeating Boulders and losing its first game to third-place Bountiful.

The playoffs will begin Tuesday, and the Cougars will again face Bountiful Game time is 7:45 p.m. at Hygeia in Salt Lake City.

Tuesday night, BYU defeated Boulders 10-3 at Hygeia. Team captain Bob Gerber had an outstanding game, leading the Cougars in scoring with six goals. Joe Bernardy, Carl Overacker and Rob Cahoon each scored one goal.

The Cougars led throughout the game, with the scoring by periods 5-0, 6-0, 1-1.

In another contest last week, the Cougars lost to Bountiful, 5-4. The same 8 Gorshkovs were protesting because of what player-coach Bernardy feels is a referee's misinterpretation of the rules.

Bernardy felt a penalty shot should have been given to the Cougars for a day of game penalty by Bountiful. A decision will be reached in a league meeting tonight.

Gerber scored three goals in the game, while Bernardy put in two.

Bernardy also commented on the officiating in the Bountiful game, saying, "The referee didn't run the game like they should have. They let the players tell them what to do, and the game got out of hand."

The Cougars have finished the regular season with a 10-5-1 record, three points ahead of Bountiful.

The BYU swimming team is looking forward to this week's Utah Invitational as a preview of the Western Athletic Conference meet. The WAC teams are scheduled to compete in the Thursday-Saturday competition at the University of Utah. Not only will all the teams be together for the first time this season, they will be competing at the site of the conference championships (WAC-4-6).

Trials and finals are slated for Wednesday evening and on Thursday and Friday and in the morning and afternoon on Saturday.

Coach Tim Powers of BYU is anxious to see how his team will do against defending champion Arizona State. However, he points out the format is altered a little from when the league meet will be run and the possibility exists that coaches might judge some of their swimmers to see where they can pick up points for the WAC.

BYU now has a dual meet record of 4-2 after Saturday's 99-17 rout of Nevada-La Vegas. The Cougars won both relays, both diving events and the nine individual swimming events.

Winners in the 400 medley relay (3:43.6) were Mark Murphy, Dave White, Paul Willy and Jim Tracy.

Ramey, Jim Jeffries and Bruce Bowlsby combined for the 400 freestyle relay title (3:18.4).

John Sorich won the 100 freestyle (42.4) while Andelin won the 200 freestyle (46.8) and Lyle Christoferson the 50 freestyle (21.75). Ferracuti was first in the 200 IM (2:04.1), Marc McGregor won the 100 freestyle (47.2).

This time, Howard hopes for a third place for the men and a second place for the women. If the men take first, they'll be tied with Utah or in first place, depending on how Utah places. If they lose, the Cougars will have a shot at a championship, but it will be a long uphill climb, Howard said.

Some of Utah's men will be attending an Intermountain downhill meet at Jackson Hole, Wyo., this weekend, so it isn't known how strong the Utes will be.
